A PRETTY LARGE STORY.—A gentleman of our acquaintance, a Friend residing in East Sandwich, a capital shot, but not given to the use of a long bow, assures us of the truth of the following: A few days since, a pigeon flew against the window of a house in that place.

1-2 dozon Chairs,
1-2 dozon Chairs, breaking the pane of glass, severing his head from his body against the sharp edge, and light-ing upon the floor of the room, walked several steps without his head. We gross-examined the narrator, who witnessed this pigeon teat, inquired particularly as to the present condi-tion of his eyesight, and ascertained he was in good standing in the monthly meeting. We believe the story.—New Bed ford Mercury.

The head is not the only part upon which the judicious parent labors to produce moral onvictions. The head has a physical antithe-is only second in value to itself for purposes f instruction .- Beecher.
